The Making of India and Pakistan is a classic work of history that provides a comprehensive and insightful account of the events leading up to the partition of the Indian subcontinent in 1947. Wolpert draws on a wide range of sources, including official documents, personal papers, and interviews with key figures, to paint a vivid picture of the political, social, and economic forces that shaped this momentous event.

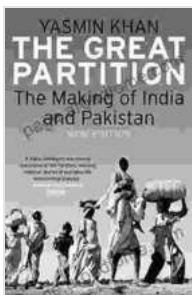

The book begins with an overview of the history of the Indian subcontinent, from the earliest civilizations to the arrival of the British in the 18th century. Wolpert then traces the rise of the Indian nationalist movement and the Muslim League, and examines the complex relationship between the two groups. He also discusses the role of the British government in the partition process, and the impact of the Second World War on the subcontinent.
