Autism is a complex neurodevelopmental disorder that affects a person's social skills, communication, and behavior. It can be difficult to understand and navigate, especially when you're in a relationship with someone who has autism.

If you're a woman who is dating or married to a man with autism, you may have noticed that he communicates differently, has difficulty understanding social cues, and may have certain repetitive behaviors. These differences can be challenging to adjust to, but with the right understanding and support, you can build a happy and fulfilling relationship.

In her new book, "When Your Man Is On The Spectrum," author and relationship expert Brenda Smith provides a comprehensive guide to help women understand and support their autistic partners. Smith draws on her own personal experience as a woman married to a man with autism, as well as her professional expertise as a therapist, to provide practical advice and insights into the unique challenges and rewards of dating and marrying a man with autism.

The book covers a wide range of topics, including:

- Communication: How to effectively communicate with your autistic partner, both verbally and nonverbally.
- Intimacy: How to navigate physical and emotional intimacy in a relationship with an autistic partner.
- Everyday challenges: How to cope with the everyday challenges of living with an autistic partner, such as sensory sensitivities, meltdowns, and social difficulties.
- Understanding autism: A detailed overview of autism, including its causes, symptoms, and diagnosis.
- Autistic partners: A look at the unique strengths and challenges of autistic partners, and how to support them in their individual needs.
- Neurodiversity: A discussion of the importance of celebrating neurodiversity and embracing the unique gifts that autistic people bring to relationships.

"When Your Man Is On The Spectrum" is an essential resource for any woman who is dating or married to a man with autism. Smith's compassionate and practical advice will help you to understand your partner's needs, build a strong and lasting relationship, and create a happy and fulfilling life together.
